Introduction

The Eucharist is “the source and summit of the Christian life” (Lumen Gentium, #11). In the Eucharistic liturgy and our prayer before the Blessed Sacrament, we encounter God’s presence in personal and profound ways. But the Eucharist is also social, as Pope Benedict XVI reminds us in Deus Caritas Est: “A Eucharist which does not pass over into the concrete practice of love is intrinsically fragmented.” The Eucharist, celebrated as a community, teaches us about human dignity, calls us to right relationship with God, ourselves and others, invites us to community and solidarity, and sends us on mission to help transform our communities, neighborhoods and world. Church teaching, rooted in both Scripture and Tradition, emphasizes both the personal and social natures of the Eucharist. This guide highlights Paul VI, John Paul II and Benedict XVI’s writings about the social nature of the Eucharist. Their words challenge and move us to encounter Christ in the Eucharist in ways both personal and social.

We experience the Eucharist as a community. The Eucharist draws each of us closer to Christ as individuals, but also as a community. As Catholics, we never really worship alone. At the Eucharistic liturgy, we gather with the young and old, the rich and poor, as well as millions around the world and the saints in heaven, to celebrate Christ’s sacrifice. This powerful reality reminds us, in the words of John Paul II: “A truly Eucharistic community cannot be closed in upon itself” (Ecclesia de Eucharistia, #39); rather the Eucharist challenges us to recognize our place within a community and the human family.

The Eucharist awakens us to our own dignity and to that of others. The Eucharist is a sign of our “incomparable dignity” as human persons. This dignity, given to all equally, regardless of their social or economic status or where they come from, causes us to recognize “what value each person, our brother or sister, has in God’s eyes, if Christ offers Himself equally to each one . . . If our Eucharistic worship is authentic, it must make us grow in awareness of the dignity of each person,” John Paul II writes (Dominicae Cenae #6).

The Eucharist unifies and heals divisions. St. Paul taught that celebration of the Eucharist is insincere if there are divisions within the community based on class (1 Cor. 11), status or privilege (Rom. 12), or there are factions within the community (1 Cor. 1). Partaking in the sacrament as equals in the family of Christ challenges us to unity as one family.

The Eucharist sensitizes us to those who suffer. As we meditate on the Eucharist, we experience Christ’s love for us—and for others. In the depth of prayer, we become so moved and sensitized to His love for those who suffer that the words of St. Augustine become a reality for us: “the pain of one, even the smallest member, is the pain of all” (Sermo Denis).

The Eucharist moves us and inspires us to respond. In the Eucharist, the boundlessness of the Father’s love, “springs up within us a lively response” that causes us to “ourselves begin to love” (John Paul II, Dominicae Cenae #5). Contemplating Christ’s sacrifice for the world in need, we are compelled to follow his example. Drawn “into the very dynamic of his self-giving” we are moved to self-giving action in solidarity with the members of our human family who face injustice (Benedict XVI, Deus Caritas Est, #13). Saint John Chrysostom’s words in the 4th century become real for us as we reflect on Mt. 25:31-46: “Do you wish to honor the body of Christ? Do not ignore him when he is naked.”
Eucharist-inspired love allows us to live out our Christian vocation. John Paul II writes that our ability to go and do likewise in imitation of Jesus’ washing of the disciples’ feet is the “criterion by which the authenticity of our Eucharistic celebration is judged” (Mane Nobiscum Domine #28). “Eucharistic worship,” he says, is the expression of “the love that springs up within us from the Eucharist”—that love which is “the authentic and deepest characteristic of the Christian vocation” (Dominicae Cenae #5).

The Eucharist challenges us to recognize and confront structures of sin. The Risen Christ in the Eucharist acts as “a compelling force for inner renewal, an inspiration to change the structures of sin in which individuals, communities and at times entire peoples are entangled” (John Paul II, Dies Domini #73). These structures include racism, violence, injustice, poverty, exploitation, and all other systemic degradation of human life or dignity. As Pope Benedict XVI reminds us, our “fraternal communion” in the Eucharist leads to “a determination to transform unjust structures and to restore respect for the dignity of all men and women, created in God’s image and likeness” (Sacramentum Caritatis #89).

The Eucharist prepares us for mission. In the face of the sin and injustice we see present in our communities and in our world, the Eucharist “plants a seed of living hope in our daily commitment to the work before us,” challenging us to live “Eucharistic” lives and affirming our role as citizens and as men and women in various professions at different levels of society in “contributing with the light of the Gospel to the building of a more human world, a world fully in harmony with God’s plan” (Ecclesia de Eucharistia #20).

The Eucharist propels us forth to transform the world. The Eucharist “increases, rather than lessens, our sense of responsibility for the world today.” Christ in the Eucharist calls us to build “a more human world, a world fully in harmony with God’s plan” (Ecclesia de Eucharistia #14). Filled with awe for all we have received in Christ’s love and self-gift, we respond: with service and works of charity, and also action for justice to transform unjust structures, policies, and laws which degrade human life and dignity.
