

July 29, 2022

United States Senate Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator,

Giant sequoia trees, an endangered species endemic to the Sierra Nevada range in California, are under threat. We write in support of the Save our Sequoias Act (H.R. 8168), a bipartisan bill that would protect California's giant sequoia trees and regenerate sequoia groves destroyed by wildfires. These majestic trees, larger than any other on earth and providing unique ecosystems where other plants and animals flourish, speak of the splendor of creation.

Some living sequoias are more than three thousand years old. As such, the value of sequoia trees transcends their remarkable ecological and even aesthetic significance (cf. Laudato si', no. 84). Living giant sequoia trees are literal and symbolic witnesses to the history of America. Some trees standing today were alive when California's first peoples, Native Americans, dwelled in the Sierra Nevada range long before European contact. They also witnessed the arrival of Spanish missionaries and the first explorers to appear in the North American Pacific coast, all the way to early American settlers and the waves of migrants that compose California's diverse population today. These trees are a symbol of human memory and history, with its lights and shadows, so dear and important for forging the identity of a people and a nation (cf. Fratelli tutti, no. 13).

We have wounded creation through sins of omission and commission. The IPCC has recognized climate change as responsible for the increase of 'fire weather' globally. Fires in 2020 and 2021 have destroyed numerous giant sequoia groves; one fire alone decimated over ten thousand giant sequoias in 2020. As we write this letter, the Washburn Fire and Oak Fire are threatening sequoia groves in Yosemite National Park, where firefighters are battling to preserve our national heritage.

The Save our Sequoias Act proposes a long-term investment and strategy to protect this patrimony of creation. We commend the Members of Congress who have sponsored this bill. After Pope Francis wrote his encyclical on ecology he followed up with Fratelli tutti: On fraternity and social friendship, an encyclical calling for "a single human family... brothers and sisters all" to put forward a "better kind of politics" (no. 8, 154). As brothers and sisters, Republicans and Democrats, we must care, together, for our one common home. The Save our Sequoias Act is a great example of the "better kind of politics" the Holy Father was advocating.

Sincerely,

Most Reverend Paul S. Coakley Archbishop of Oklahoma City Chair, Committee on Domestic Justice

+ Paul S. Coality

and Human Development United States Conference of Catholic Bishops Most Reverend Gerald Wilkerson

+ Derald E. Wilherson

Auxiliary Bishop Emeritus of Los Angeles Chair, Environmental Stewardship Committee

California Catholic Conference

July 29, 2022

United States House of Representatives Washington, DC 20515

Dear Representative,

Giant sequoia trees, an endangered species endemic to the Sierra Nevada range in California, are under threat. We write in support of the Save our Sequoias Act (H.R. 8168), a bipartisan bill that would protect California's giant sequoia trees and regenerate sequoia groves destroyed by wildfires. These majestic trees, larger than any other on earth and providing unique ecosystems where other plants and animals flourish, speak of the splendor of creation.

Some living sequoias are more than three thousand years old. As such, the value of sequoia trees transcends their remarkable ecological and even aesthetic significance (cf. Laudato si', no. 84). Living giant sequoia trees are literal and symbolic witnesses to the history of America. Some trees standing today were alive when California's first peoples, Native Americans, dwelled in the Sierra Nevada range long before European contact. They also witnessed the arrival of Spanish missionaries and the first explorers to appear in the North American Pacific coast, all the way to early American settlers and the waves of migrants that compose California's diverse population today. These trees are a symbol of human memory and history, with its lights and shadows, so dear and important for forging the identity of a people and a nation (cf. Fratelli tutti, no. 13).

We have wounded creation through sins of omission and commission. The IPCC has recognized climate change as responsible for the increase of 'fire weather' globally. Fires in 2020 and 2021 have destroyed numerous giant sequoia groves; one fire alone decimated over ten thousand giant sequoias in 2020. As we write this letter, the Washburn Fire and Oak Fire are threatening sequoia groves in Yosemite National Park, where firefighters are battling to preserve our national heritage.

The Save our Sequoias Act proposes a long-term investment and strategy to protect this patrimony of creation. We commend the Members of Congress who have sponsored this bill. After Pope Francis wrote his encyclical on ecology he followed up with Fratelli tutti: On fraternity and social friendship, an encyclical calling for "a single human family... brothers and sisters all" to put forward a "better kind of politics" (no. 8, 154). As brothers and sisters, Republicans and Democrats, we must care, together, for our one common home. The Save our Sequoias Act is a great example of the "better kind of politics" the Holy Father was advocating.

Sincerely,

Most Reverend Paul S. Coakley Archbishop of Oklahoma City

+ Paul S. Coality

Chair, Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development

United States Conference of Catholic Bishops

Most Reverend Gerald Wilkerson

Auxiliary Bishop Emeritus of Los Angeles Chair, Environmental Stewardship Committee

+ Derald E. Wilherson

California Catholic Conference