Asian and Pacific Islander Survey – Episcopal Regions

Introduction

Reverend Simon C. Kim, Ph.D.

As we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Second Vatican Council, the call to be a church of renewal and engaged with the world is still a task, opportunity, and privilege of local communities. The vision of John XXIII in calling the council prepared the way for the church in the modern world, a church that continues to live out her mission in a world characterized by global immigration.

The latest U.S. Census and this survey conducted by the Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs (SCAPA) affirm the growing and dynamic presence of people of Asian and Pacific Island heritage in both church and society in the United States.

Asian and Pacific Island Catholics in the U.S. present a unique opportunity to live out the ecclesiology of Vatican II as the church reexamines herself in light of changing demographics. Since the passing of 1965 Immigration Act opening U.S. borders to increased immigration from the Pacific Rim, the number of Asians and Pacific Islanders residing in the United States has grown every decade. The 2010 census reveals that the overall Asian and Pacific Island population, as a whole, increased since the 2000 Census and shows no signs of slowing down in the near future. This is a hopeful sign for the future of the United States as a country and the U.S. Catholic Church, both of whom are built on the efforts and contributions of many generations of immigrants.

This hope, however, is not solely based on population growth but more importantly, is founded on the opportunity of living out Vatican II's vision of a culturally-rich church. Today, Asian and Pacific Island Catholics present the possibility of revitalizing and reimagining what it means to be a church renewed, engaged, and in solidarity. First, Asian and Pacific Island Catholics bring about renewal, as the local church must reexamine how to incorporate the worship of each ethnic group as well as their cultural characteristics. This means that every diocese must examine the structures of pastoral ministry, for what worked in one culture or in one moment of history does not necessarily address the needs of Asian and Pacific Island Catholic communities today. Second, addressing the ongoing and growing Asian and Pacific Island needs means that the church must engage the world of the immigrants in order to discern the signs of the times within their context. Ministry to Asian and Pacific Island Catholics requires more than liturgical accommodation, since many of these communities come together as a community of both faith and culture. Asians and Pacific Islanders embody certain characteristics of the poor since many still come to the U.S. seeking a better life, but also poor in spirit through the immigration process of departure, displacement, and resettlement. Thus, the Asian and Pacific Island presence affords the church in the United States an opportunity to be the pilgrim people of God as the church continually reexamines herself in light of global migration.

This SCAPA survey highlights the opportunity for the U.S. Catholic Church to grow as a unique ecclesial body. These results indicate the importance of Asian and Pacific Island immigration and contribution to the overall church and society in the U.S. Therefore, in order for dioceses to engage and reap the benefits of this dynamic cultural and religious exchange, they must not only be able to accommodate linguistic differences in liturgy, but also cultural aspects of worship that journey with the immigrants. The universal faith incorporates local expressions and these expressions of the faith have travelled across the Pacific and are now taking root again in the United States. For example, the SCAPA survey indicates that the cultural devotions to Our Lady along with the celebration of native saints are strongly observed within these ethnic communities. The celebrations of these feasts allow Asian and Pacific Island Catholics to maintain their heritage as well as safeguarding their cultural identities. In a new country, much comfort and reassurance come from seeing the Blessed Mother as one like them and saints from their homeland. These saintly figures represent the cultural, religious, and relational ties to the country of origin after the immigrants' departure, while at the same time they become the foundation in the resettlement process with the rest of the ecclesial community in this new land.

Asians and Pacific Islanders present a wonderful opportunity to contribute to the surrounding social and ecclesial realities not simply by their increasing numbers but also by their cultural heritage and social characteristics. Although professing a universal Catholic faith, these ethnic groups cannot be accounted for in the same traditional manner. For instance, Asian and Pacific Island faith communities represent strong cultural affinities as they cross several parish boundaries. Conducting a comprehensive survey is a challenging task since new methods must be deployed in ascertaining the correct population size and needs of Asian and Pacific Island Catholics. In addition to the challenges presented by the multitude of ethnic groups in the U.S., the linguistic diversity also makes surveying very difficult and time consuming. Without proper channels of communication along with new cultural and generational descriptors, survey results vary from group to group. Thus, the challenge in surveying this population becomes evident as traditional models of measuring demographics and religious behaviors are not adequate and, as a result, Asian and Pacific Island Catholics are often undercounted, underrepresented, and underserved.

Due to these factors, this SCAPA survey cannot present comprehensive results at this time, especially since roughly only half of the dioceses contacted responded. Along with minimum diocesan participation, the challenges of documenting Asian and Pacific Island Catholics are present in this survey as well. It is difficult to say what all the numbers truly mean for dioceses across the U.S. However, this does not mean that this report has no value or merit. Rather, the sheer numbers of Asian and Pacific Island Catholics indicate an ongoing and growing presence in the church and that further research and surveys must be conducted to better engage this demographic group. Thus, this SCAPA survey is a benchmark of sorts for further surveys to measure against and to illustrate the changing landscape of our church and society.

ASIAN AND PACIFIC MINISTRY SURVEY

Dr. Ruth Narita Doyle

In 2001, the pastoral letter Asian and Pacific Presence: Harmony in Faith affirmed the presence of our Asian and Pacific Catholics in the United States for the first time. As part of the celebration of its tenth anniversary, the USCCB Secretariat of Cultural Diversity in the Church commissioned a survey of dioceses to gather information on their outreach to our Asian and Pacific brothers and sisters.

RESPONSE

Responses were received from 99 dioceses out of a possible 195 dioceses in the United States. The highest response rates were from the Pacific, Central Plains, and the New York and South Atlantic Episcopal regions. We thank the dioceses who completed the questionnaire and assisted in our planning for the next decade.

The responding dioceses comprised just over half of the 178 Latin rite dioceses in the United States, but contained three quarters (74%) of the Catholic population and 69% of the total population.

DIOCESAN ASIAN PACIFIC COMMUNITIES

The Asian and Pacific Island community is varied. The reporting dioceses represent twenty-eight different communities, with Filipinos and Vietnamese most commonly mentioned by over three quarters of the dioceses, and Koreans by three fifths.

TYPE OF DIOCESAN SERVICE

Diocesan Programs for Asian and Pacific Island Catholics

Self-standing	38	21.6
Combined Multicultural office	27	15.3
Parish-based	27	15.3
None	84	47.7

This information is for all dioceses, as reported by responding dioceses and supplemented by information gathered from the 2011 edition of The Official Catholic Directory.

Almost half (48%) of all dioceses do not provide any targeted diocesan ministry to Asian Pacific Islander Catholics and 15% provide ministry only through parishes.

Less than one quarter (22%) of dioceses have a self-standing office; another one sixth (15%) provide this ministry through a multicultural office, and another one sixth through parish-based ministry. What this suggests is that fewer than 40% of dioceses provide some targeted service to Asian Pacific Catholics through diocesan offices.

The dioceses that responded to the survey are more likely to provide programs and services for the Asian Pacific community than the dioceses who did not respond.

PERSONNEL

Asian Pacific personnel, especially priests, are present in many dioceses (total Asian Pacific personnel reported by responding dioceses include 1,688 priests). The majority are diocesan priests, totaling 1,074. Another 604 are priests from religious orders. There are 221 permanent deacons. Looking to the future, there are 157 seminarians and 65 candidates for the diaconate.

Representation on diocesan councils is an important indicator of the recognition of leadership. The priests' councils in responding dioceses have 69 Asian Pacific members; arch/diocesan pastoral councils have fewer than 41 Asian Pacific members. Other diocesan advisory groups have fewer than 31.

The presence of Asian Pacific Islanders among diocesan staff is far more limited. The highest numbers are in administration and support services, with fewer in pastoral ministry. Filipinos and Vietnamese are the two largest groups among the staff in all three areas of ministry. Pastoral ministry staff is the most varied and includes Chinese, Koreans, Hmong, Laotians, Asian Indians, and Pacific Islanders. Administrative staff includes Indian, Japanese, Korean, and a Chamorro. Support service includes Chinese and Koreans.

SERVICES

Dioceses were asked what services they provided to the Asian Pacific Community. Most commonly, sacramental services were provided by 60 dioceses, three fifths, but not all of the dioceses. Services provided by almost half of the dioceses include: religious education for children and adults, catechetical material, youth and young adult ministry, and, importantly, immigration services. Spiritual support, such as retreats and counseling, is provided by over one third of the dioceses. Leadership formation and citizenship training is offered by close to one quarter of the dioceses, and very few offer cultural/language classes or campus ministry.

LITURGY

The many languages in which Mass is celebrated and the many celebrations of various feasts have greatly enriched the liturgical life of the dioceses and brought a greater awareness of the universality of the Church.

Responding dioceses report that Mass is celebrated in more than 30 Asian Pacific languages. It is celebrated most frequently in Vietnamese, by almost three quarters of the dioceses, and in Korean and Tagalog by over half of the dioceses. Chinese Mandarin, Malayan, Lebanese, Hmong, and Indonesian are used in about 10 dioceses.

The celebration of many feasts enriches the local church and invites participation in the universality of the Church. Almost twenty feasts are celebrated, which include feasts of Our Lady and the many martyrs of the Asian Pacific countries. Most frequently, Chinese, Vietnamese, and the Lao New Year are celebrated (in almost half of the dioceses), followed by celebrations for the many Asian martyrs: Chinese, Vietnamese, Filipino, and Japanese. As noted by several dioceses, the Filipino celebration of Simbang Gabi is widely honored and an occasion for evangelization.

PARTICIPATION IN LEADERSHIP PROGRAMS

In general, participation in national leadership programs has been limited. Three national programs have taken place, two in the 1990s and one (the only national Asian Pacific Catholic gathering) in 2006, which was attended by 17 dioceses among our respondents. Asian Pacific Institutes for Ministry and Mission were held in three regions of the country and only eight dioceses indicated their participation. Participation in the Pastoral Experience programs, which took diocesan personnel to Asia, was also limited; seven dioceses indicated their participation in these programs, which were the first to provide hands-on orientation for diocesan personnel ministering to people from Asian cultures.

A variety of other leadership programs have been conducted. Some were for a specific Asian Pacific community. Some dioceses held specific programs for youth leaders. One diocese noted that pastoral planning used our pastoral letter as their guide.

INTERRELIGIOUS DIALOGUE

About one-third of the responding dioceses provide interreligious dialogue with Buddhism, Hinduism, and other Asian religions. This takes place mainly through the Office of Ecumenical and Interreligious dialogue, and through lectures and talks for a few dioceses. Some dialogue may take place in parishes through lectures and programs, such as visiting a Buddhist temple. One diocese participates in important gatherings of Buddhist, Muslims, Hindus, and other religions.

CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE ASIAN PACIFIC COMMUNITIES

The contribution of the Asian and Pacific communities can perhaps be summed up by the statement of one diocese: “They bring a vibrant expression of faith in the way they lead their daily lives...that deepen our awareness of the Church universal.” Many dioceses noted their strong faith commitment, willingness to serve, vibrant liturgies, and shared leadership.

Frequently appreciated was their contribution to clergy personnel, especially for priests. Especially noted were their strong family commitment and the importance of their faith for the family.

HELPFUL DIOCESAN OUTREACH EFFORTS

Particularly noted was the diocesan effort to provide priests for the various cultural groups, and also workshops for priests and religious. Many dioceses found the information about the presence and extent of the various Asian Pacific groups’ helpful and also appreciated information on diocesan outreach, such as the invitation to participate in diocesan programs, for example priest/religious meetings and safe environment meetings.

Especially important were the provision of Eucharistic celebrations in different languages and the support of cultural celebrations; the establishment of ethnic parishes for the Vietnamese and Korean communities was also noted. The training of Asian Pacific leaders was seen as important, as well as the education of diocesan and parish leaders about the various Asian and Pacific communities.

Other helpful diocesan efforts were:

- An annual diocesan Asian Pacific Mass at the cathedral, and the presence of the bishop at important feast days were found to be helpful
- Demographic information was found necessary to recognize the need
- The establishment of Vietnamese and Korean parishes was noted by several dioceses
- What is important in the various efforts of the dioceses is the balance between the need for cultural celebrations and community, and the involvement in diocesan structures and events.
- Supportive and pastoral diocesan structures and planning that allow recognitions of and respectful communication, dialogues, participation, and integration of Asian communities.
- Annual Asian Pacific Mass at the Basilica of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D.C.
- An annual retreat
- Tuition assistance for Catholic schools
- Sharing information and materials with other dioceses.

WAYS IN WHICH DIOCESES NEED ASSISTANCE IN REACHING OUT TO ASIAN AND PACIFIC ISLAND COMMUNITIES

Assistance was sought for catechetical and liturgical materials for the various Asian and Pacific groups by almost half of the responding dioceses. Also, educational materials about the various Asian and Pacific Island communities and presenters for this material were sought by two thirds of the dioceses.

Demographics have been helpful, as noted earlier by some dioceses; an additional group needs help in obtaining demographics for their dioceses. Materials were sought for young adults.

Ways in which assistance could be provided to dioceses:

- Many suggestions were offered; first and foremost, catechetical materials for the various groups.
 - Workshops for clergy and diocesan staff.
 - Sharing of available resources about the various Asian and Pacific cultural groups; as one diocesan respondent wrote, “completion of the survey was an education.”
 - Best outreach models for small groups or small populations
 - Identify groups
 - Collaborate and share resources
 - National advisors to help coordinate planning
 - Work together and collaborate (Local communities are encouraged to collaborate and participate in the life of the local church.)
 - Multilingual resources on internet
 - Apply for grants
 - Safe environment documents in different languages
 - Minister together and network
 - Youth and young adult materials
 - Provide resources/models
 - Update info on Asian Pacific community, including speakers and presenters
 - Translate major USCCB documents
 - Provide models and resources for diocesan ministry to Asian Pacific communities.
- Key to all these is that churches share their resources.

General Overview

- As of April 1, 2010, a total of 14,674,000 Asians were living in the United States, some 4.8% of the total U.S. population; and 540,000 or 0.2% of the total U.S. population, were Pacific Islander residents.¹
- In 2010, Chinese Americans (3.87 million) were the largest Asian group, followed by Filipinos (3.25 million), Asian Indian (2.95 million), Vietnamese (1.70 million), Koreans (1.64 million), and Japanese (1.32 million).²
- The largest Pacific Islander groups in 2010 were Native Hawaiian (158,221), Micronesian (127,015), Samoans (96,362), Guamanians (77,038), and Tongans (39,532).³
- Hawaii had the largest Asian (38.5%), as well as Pacific Islander (10.1%) populations in 2010.⁴ Combined that puts Asian and Pacific Islander at 48.6%, almost half the total population of Hawaii, where 22.8% of the population is Catholic and over 50% of the Catholic population is Asian and Pacific Islander.
- A survey found that Mass was held in 30 different Asian and Pacific Islander languages across the United States.⁵
- Except for Filipinos, the majority of Asian people in the United States are followers of Buddhism, Hinduism, and Islam.⁶
- In 2011, there were 157 seminarians, and a total of 1,688 priests of Asian and Pacific Islander heritage.⁷ Also 9 percent of the ordination class of 2012 was of Asian and Pacific Islander descent.⁸
- Asian and Pacific Islanders represent only 4% of the Catholic Church in the United States, but they are over-represented for ordination to the priesthood.⁹
- The top 10 dioceses with the highest number of Asians in the United States are New York City, Los Angeles, San Jose, San Francisco, San Diego, Honolulu, Chicago, Galveston-Houston, Oakland, and Philadelphia.¹⁰
- The top 7 dioceses with the highest number of Pacific Islanders, according to the 2010 U.S. Census, are Honolulu, Anchorage, Little Rock, Seattle, Salt Lake, Oklahoma City, and Sacramento.¹¹
- Asian Catholics also include members of the Eastern Catholic Churches of the Syro-Malabar, Syro-Malankara, and Maronite traditions.
- To date, five bishops of Asian and Pacific Islander origin have been ordained in the United States; only four remain active.

Detailed Portrait

Asians

Growth

- Asians grew faster than any other race group from 2000 to 2010, this goes for both Asian Census categories of Asian alone and Asian alone or in combination with another group.¹²
- The Asian population increased 4 times faster than the total population in the United States.¹³
- Many groups exhibited large growth, but the Bhutanese were the fastest growing group.¹⁴
- Chinese, Filipino, Asian Indian, Vietnamese, Korean, and Japanese make up 83% of all Asian Americans.¹⁵
- Asians have grown from 1% of the U.S. population in 1965 to 5.8% of the population in 2011.¹⁶

Families and Children

- There were a total of 4,644,197 Asian households in America in 2011. Of that, 74.2%, or 3,445,994 were Family households.¹⁷
- 60.0% of all households were married couples in 2011.¹⁸
- 57.9% of the population of 15 and over was married in 2011.¹⁹

Foreign Born

- The total Asian population was 15,020,419 people in 2011.²⁰
- Of those, 10,003,747 Asians living in the United States in 2011 were born abroad. That is 66.6% of the total Asian American population.²¹

Asian and Pacific Islander Survey – Episcopal Regions

2000-2010

Population Growth of the Asian and Native Hawaiian & Pacific Islander Community v. the Population Growth of the Total Population of the United States by Episcopal Region

This bar graph displays the population growth of the Asian and Native Hawaiian & Pacific Islander Community compared with the population growth of the total U.S. population of the span of the decade of 2000-2010 across each episcopal region. As you can clearly see in every region the Asian and Native Hawaiian & Pacific Islander Community had a much greater growth rate than the total U.S. Population by great numbers. According the U.S. Census Bureau, Asians are the fastest growing ethnicity, and that claim is heartily reflected in the graph above.

All Charts and Tables use the categories “Asian Alone or in Combination” and “Native Hawaiian & Pacific Islander Alone or in Combination.” This was done to account for the entire Asian and Pacific Islander Community in the 50 States and the District of Columbia. Only reflected in the Catholic demographics are the 50 States and the District of Columbia, with the exclusion of the Eastern Rite Churches, which will be accounted for in Figure 35, and the Military. Only Catholics in the 50 States and the District of Columbia are counted as U.S Catholics for the purposes of this document.

Eastern Catholic Jurisdictions

The Eastern Catholic Churches in the U.S. are arranged differently from the Roman Catholic Churches, in that they sometimes have a diocese or Eparchy that spans the entire U.S. instead of being held within one state, others are like other dioceses and stay within the state they originate from. Here in this chart are the Eastern Catholic Churches accounted for in terms of number of Catholics that belong to each Church or Diocese. Dioceses that are demarcated by location had no other identifying information for them in our source the Official Catholic Directory 2011. Therefore we could only conclude that it is the sum of the different Eastern Catholic communities in that city.
